STRIDE LOGO DESCRIPTION

The silhouette of a playful child with arms outstretched toward the sky and legs spread wide as if running. The playful child's head is a circle unattached to the body and sits between the outstretched arms. The arms are comprised of a half circle connecting both arms together. The top of both arms have open hands formed by a "u" shape separating the thumb from the fingers. The arm section does not connect with the legs, except for the left one-quarter of the logo. The lower portion of the child's arms come to a point at the bottom of the left arm before curving slightly upward and back down to meet the leg portion of the logo. The legs are stretched as in a running motion. One leg is ready to land with the toes of the foot pointing to the right of the logo. The other leg is in the air as if it pushed off the ground with the toes of the foot pointing at an angle to the left of the logo.

The logo is mostly solid. There is a shading effect created by white spotting on the back one-third of the head, legs and arms. On the head, the white spotting effect extends from right of center at the tip and curves along the left one-third of the circle ending left of center at the bottom of the circle. The white spotting on the arm (on the right side of the logo) begins just below the finger and follows the top of the half circle toward the other arm, stopping just under the left portion of the head. The arm on the left of the logo has white spotting that begins just below the tip of the fingers and merges with the white spotting on the leg on the same side of the logo. The white spotting extends to the heel of the foot on both feet. The white spotting on the leg to the right of the logo begins at the heel and extends up to and stops at the point where both legs come together.

The child's silhouette sits above a brush stroke that starts at a point under the foot to the left of the logo. The point of the brush stroke is pointing to the left and widens as it curves down to a thicker width facing the bottom of the logo which sits under the heel of the foot on the right of the logo. There is again a shading effect created by white spotting which extends the entire width of the brush stroke at the right side of the logo where the brush stroke comes to its widest end and extends up the brushstroke about one-third of the way toward the side of the brush stroke that comes to a point.

The logo is sometimes used in different color schemes. In all instances, the white spotting remains unchanged in the same locations as described.

One additional feature is that the words "STRIDE Learning Center" appears within the logo. The word "STRIDE" is in all capital letters directly under the playful child and the words "Learning Center" directly beneath the word "STRIDE" in smaller font. The right leg of the letter "R" in "STRIDE" is elongated and extends to a point below the letter "I". The right leg of the "R" also has the white spotting effect on the bottom two-thirds of the leg which extends from the top of the leg to just before short of the point under the letter "I".

STRIDE LOGO DESCRIPTION

The silhouette of a playful child with arms outstretched toward the sky and legs spread wide as if running. The playful child's head is a circle unattached to the body and sits between the outstretched arms. The arms are comprised of a half circle connecting both arms together. The top of both arms have open hands formed by a "u" shape separating the thumb from the fingers. The arm section does not connect with the legs, except for the left one-quarter of the logo. The lower portion of the child's arms come to a point at the bottom of the left arm before curving slightly upward and back down to meet the leg portion of the logo. The legs are stretched as in a running motion. One leg is ready to land with the toes of the foot pointing to the right of the logo. The other leg is in the air as if it pushed off the ground with the toes of the foot pointing at an angle to the left of the logo.

The logo is mostly solid. There is a shading effect created by white spotting on the back one-third of the head, legs and arms. On the head, the white spotting effect extends from right of center at the tip and curves along the left one-third of the circle ending left of center at the bottom of the circle. The white spotting on the arm (on the right side of the logo) begins just below the finger and follows the top of the half circle toward the other arm, stopping just under the left portion of the head. The arm on the left of the logo has white spotting that begins just below the tip of the fingers and merges with the white spotting on the leg on the same side of the logo. The white spotting extends to the heel of the foot on both feet. The white spotting on the leg to the right of the logo begins at the heel and extends up to and stops at the point where both legs come together.

The child's silhouette sits above a brush stroke that starts at a point under the foot to the left of the logo. The point of the brush stroke is pointing to the left and widens as it curves down to a thicker width facing the bottom of the logo which sits under the heel of the foot on the right of the logo. The logo is sometimes used in different color schemes. In all instances, the white spotting remains unchanged in the same locations as described.

One additional feature is that the words "STRIDE Learning Center" appears within the logo. The word "STRIDE" is in all capital letters directly under the playful child and the words "Learning Center" directly beneath the word "STRIDE" in smaller font. The right leg of the letter "R" in "STRIDE" is elongated and extends to a point below the letter "I". The right leg of the "R" also has the white spotting effect on the bottom two-thirds of the leg which extends from the top of the leg to just before short of the point under the letter "I".
